CONFIDENT THERE IS
MISTAKE SOMEWHERE

First Time Writer Ever Has Heard That General Armstrong Was Suspected of Disloyalty.

To the Editor of The Times-Dispatch: Sir,—In your last Sunday's edition of January 24, 1915, I find an article written by D. W. Garrett, late of Company C, Forty-second Virginia Regiment, Confederate States Army, in which he gives the following information. He says: "I have recently read a book entitled 'The Battle of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg,' by General A.
Doubladay, of the United States Army, in which he (General Doubledaday) states that Brigadier-General Armstrong, of Pickett's Division, Confederate States Army, was shot down by the side of the gun he had taken, and that he fought on our side in the battle of Bull Run, but had been seduced by Southern affections, and now dying in the effort to extend the area of slavery over the free States. He says with a clear vision that he had been engaged in an unholy cause, and said to one of our officers who leaned over him: 'Tell Hancock I have wronged him and have wronged my country.'

I can but hope that there is a grievous mistake about this statement somewhere. As much as I have read and gathered information from Southern and Northern historians regarding the War between the States, and read of the lives of the generals who fought so gallantly on both sides, this is the first intimation that I have ever had that General Armstrong was ever accused or suspected of disloyalty to his country.

On page 176, "Confederate Military History," this statement is made:
"Brigadier-General Lewis Addison Armistead was given the rank of major, Confederate States Army, to date from March 16, 1861." Now, the battle of Bull Run was fought in July, 1861, over four months after he was appointed major in the Confederate army.
After the battle of Gettysburg, General Lee referred to General Armistead in his report in the following words:
"He died as he had lived, discharging the highest duties as a patriot with devotion that never faltered and courage that shrank from no danger."

To the Editor of the Times-Dispatch: Sir,—I write to call attention to an omission in the genealogy of that branch of the Estill family given by Dr. Andrew Estill in your issue of December 27.

Dr. Henry M. or Harry M. Estill, uncle of Dr. Andrew Estill, and for a time surgeon of the Virginia Military Institute, had ten children, instead of eight, as stated in the account referred to. The names of the two children omitted were the oldest son, Charles Patrick Estill, and another son, Harry Estill. Charles Patrick Estill, father of the writer, was educated at Washington College and at the University of Virginia; served as captain of ordinance on General Gordon's staff; married Kate Fishburne, of Waynesboro, Va.; moved to Texas soon after the close of the war; was successively superintendent of schools of Brenham, Texas; professor of ancient languages in the State Agricultural College, and professor of English in the Sam Houston State Normal. He left five children: Harry Fishburne, Annie Rhodes, Jennie Patrick, Junius Fishburne and Libby. The oldest son, Harry F., married Louie Sexton, daughter of Colonel

F. B. Sexton, former Confederate Congressman from Texas. This son is now president of the Texas State Normal School, at Huntsville, and has five children: Frank Sexton, Katherine Fish-burne, Mary Sexton, Harry Fishburne, Jr., and Ruth. The other son of Dr.
Henry Estill, of Washington, Va., whose name was omitted, Harry Estill, was at the time of his death, professor of natural philosophy in Washington-Lee University. He never married.
Trusting that you will give space to these omissions, I am, Yours very truly,
HARRY FISHBURNE ESTILL.
